Trade PB, brand new, unread, 119 pp. This report reveals that children are held in prison-like conditions for several months or longer. The INS detains too many children for too long, fails to inform them of their legal rights, interferes with their efforts to obtain legal representation or to consult in private with their lawyers, and fails to facilitate contact with family members. Many abuses are due to the conflicting roles by the INS of prosecutorial on one hand and care-giving on the other.
