An interesting exhibit was made by Mr. Davenport of test pieces of southern yellow pine and Norway pine which had been tested as to tension on the United States standard testing machine at Watertown, and also a number of similar pieces which had been tested by Prof. Thurston s torsion testing machine The object of the tests was to determine if possible the relative merits of the two woods for use in car construction. The tests showed differences of about 30 per cent, in favor of the northern or Norway pine for car work, while the resinous character of the southern pine rendered it better for heavy timbers for bridge work. A curious fact was quoted in regard to the action of the two woods in the planing machine. The shavings from the southern pine crumbled under the fingers, while...
