Can you compare their forests with those managed by the Federal Government, for example, or on other private lands What is your observation ORDON Mr. G. Well, I think Indian forestry has two big advantages with respect to any other forest management. Weve talked about some of the disadvantages - under-funding and under-staff-ing - but the two big advantages are that they live with the consequences of all their decisions. Senator S. Because theyre there. MITH ORDON Mr. G. If they decide not to cut timber, they get to not have the money. Senator S. Yes. MITH ORDON Mr. G. If they decide to burn, they get to cope with the smoke. So I think that leads to a balanced view of forest management, and I think thats a very good thing. The second thing is that...
