OCLC Number: (OCoLC)37543435 Subject: Naval aviation -- Costs -- Evaluation. Excerpt: . . . Chapter 1 Introduction Competition between the public and private sectors for depot Public-Private maintenance work initially began in fiscal year 1985 when the Congress Competition authorized a test program to allow public and private shipyards to compete for the overhaul of selected ships on the basis of cost comparisons. The competition programs goal was to help balance public and private industrial base concerns while achieving economy through competition. The Congress believed that by allowing public and private shipyards to directly compete for work, depot performance would be improved and depot maintenance costs would be reduced. Our 1994 report 2 provided the history and status of the Navys ship competition program. In fiscal year 1987, the Congress authorized the Navy to expand the scope of the competition program to include public-private competitions for work package subjected to NAVAIR depot repair of aircraft. The first public-private competition was for F-14 standard depot-level maintenance. NAVAIR In December 1990, published plans to greatly expand its public-private competition program to meet the savings goal of a Defense Management Review initiative regarding aviation depot maintenance. The NAVAIR plan assumed that most airframe and engine overhaul work above the minimum levels required to support the depot industrial base would be subjected to public-private competition. The plan specifically included future competition for 10 different airframes and 4 different engines. Partly based on initial results from the F-14 competition, the plan also assumed that the new competitions would result in a 20-percent savings in maintenance costs, or about 550 million by fiscal year 1995. In fiscal...
